

SHOCKING: The International Olympic Committee allowed Algeria's Imane Khelif and Taiwan's Lin Yu-ting—who were disqualified from last year's Women's World Boxing Championships after failing gender tests—to receive gold medals.

“I have never been hit so hard in my life,” said Angela Carini, the female boxer from Italy who had her Olympic dreams shattered when she quit in tears after 46 seconds of being forced to fight Khelif.

Esra Yildiz Kahraman, a female boxer from Turkey, repeatedly made an "X" gesture at the crowd after losing to Yu-ting, indicating her opponent's unfair advantage.

Nancy Hogshead, three-time gold medalist at the 1984 Olympic Games, said, “Gender ideology will get women KILLED.” We need to make our voices heard before it's too late!

Over 625,000 people have signed our Petition to Save Women's Sports. Join the fight to demand that the International Olympic Committee protect female athletes. Add your name today!

Biological men are invading women's sports, robbing female athletes of opportunities, and infringing upon their rights.

The data is clear. Since 2003, biological men (who self-identify as females) have captured at least 28 women's sports titles.

Girls are being deprived of championship titles, college scholarships, the opportunity to compete in the Olympics—and the simple sense of accomplishment. This will continue unless something is done to push back against the radical left-wing gender activists.

It is time to stand up for the rights of female athletes.

Tell the National High School Sports Federation, the National College Athletic Association, and the International Olympic Committee that enough is enough.
